complies with the pure food laws of all states.
Food prepared with it is free from Rochelle salts, lime, alum and ammonia.

Trust Baking Powders sell for 45 or 50 cents per pound and may be identified by this exorbitant price.
They are a menace to public health, as food prepared from them contains large quantities of Rochelle salts, a dangerous cathartic drug.

Made the Marriage Sure.

An amusing story is told of a marriage celebrated in the Glasgow (Scotland) southern police court some time ago. A man and woman were being tried on a charge of riotous conduct in Main street, Glasgow. In the indictment they were described as man and wife, but from the evidence offered to the court it was more than doubtful whether they were actually married. The presiding magistrate, evidently suspicious that there was no such relationship between the pair, asked the woman, "Is this man (pointing to the male prisoner) your husband?" "Yes," was the answer. "And," turning to the man, "Is this woman your wife?" "Yes," "Well, then," said his honor, who was well versed in the Scots law of marriage, "whether you were married before or not, you are now."

THOSE EXTENDED FINGERS

Popular Misconception of Long-Standing at Last Cleared Up.

A social philosopher has discovered that an act very commonly regarded as an affectation of gentility, as found in the manner of holding a drinking glass when drinking from it, is not an affectation at all but really an unconscious automatic act, says the New York Sun.

This supposed affectation consists in extending the third and fourth fingers of the hand clear of the glass when it is lifted and tipped forward with its brim to the lips and while the glass is held there in the act of drinking. No doubt it would commonly be considered that people do this for the sake of greater elegance, or at least from an instinctive desire to give to the hand such an appearance, which it would not possess if they closed the entire hand around the glass—if they clutched it, so to speak, a manner of holding that would seem to savor of rudeness.

But this observers says that really people hold these two fingers clear of the glass in drinking because that is the way that is most convenient. If, he says, a person should grasp the glass with the whole hand closed snugly around it he would find that the act of tipping the glass so held required more muscular effort, for the muscles extending from all the fingers would then be called into use.
Whereas if the person drinking holds the glass between the thumb and the first two fingers he not only relieves entirely the tension on the muscles of the two other fingers, but also in a way he pivots the glass and makes it easier to tip on that account. Thus the separation of the two fingers from the glass is a perfectly natural act.

This philosopher concedes that the act may be exaggerated; that fingers thus extended might even be seen raised and extended more than was really comfortable for the better display of rings adorning them, and he concedes that sometimes when we see our fingers thus raised as we lift our glass, in clear view of all, we may seek to crook the fingers in attitudes or curves of greater grace, and so he concedes that in some cases the raising of the fingers in lifting the glass may show affectation in some measure; but his point is that in its original inception and in its practice by the many the elevation of these two fingers is not an affectation, but an act quite unconscious and automatic.

GOOD MILK MUCH NEEDED.

Much Poor Material Put Upon the Market in the Large Cities.

One of the compilers of the Year Book of the department of agriculture is authority for the statement that while few cities in the north are well served with a good quality of milk, the south is even a greater sufferer.
The material put on the markets, particularly in the poorer portions of the large cities, is of such a character as to give the general city dweller a poor idea of the value of milk as a food. The housewife who refused to buy milk from a dairyman because she had found a thick, greasy scum on the sample left the day before is not a rarity. The sight of real cream was probably so unusual to her that she did not recognize it in its place of origin. Much of the milk offered for sale is watered and mixed with antiseptics, such as formalin, boracic acid, etc., in order to keep it from suring.
Where milk of this kind is sold it should be an easy matter for an honest and capable dairyman to establish a good business. It is safe to say that half the towns in the United States offer good opportunities in this line at the present time.

There are a number of reasons why the profit in the retail milk trade is not so large as might be imagined.
The cost of delivering milk is considerable, especially in large cities where customers may be widely scattered. There is also more or less loss from patrons who do not pay. Where the ticket system is used persons frequently forget to put out the milk ticket for the early morning delivery.
To get this ticket then requires a special trip some time in the day, which usually costs more than the ticket is worth. In conducting business of this kind, where small quantities of material are sold to a large number of people, promptness in collecting bills is necessary to success. There are many people in the city who cannot understand that in the summer time good milk, even under the best conditions, will sour within a day or two, and that milk which is not so affected should be looked upon with suspicion.
Some successful dairymen furnish their patrons with printed literature giving facts regarding the composition of milk and the care of it to prevent souring.

OUR LANGUAGE UNIFORM.

While Great Britain, for instance,
Has Many Different Languages.

It has been observed that the language spoken in the United States is remarkably uniform, says H. M.
Kingsley, in "The Language of the Map," in St. Nicholas. True, there are many dialects, but Great Britain, less in area than any one of half a dozen of our states, contains such very different languages as English, Welsh and the Gaelic of the Scottish Highlands, to say nothing of the provincial dialects of Cornwall and Yorkshire and the unique speech of the London cockney; while in this country, with its vast expanse of territory, its settlement by Spanish, French, Dutch and Swedish colonists, and its millions of immigrants drawn from nearly every country, large and small, all over the world, there is far greater uniformity of speech than in any other land of equal area and population.

The causes can be readily seen. The public schools have made us a nation of readers, and the press has supplied books and papers without limit.
Press associations have done their part toward giving a uniform and fairly good tone to the newspaper language of the day. The telegraph, the telephone and cheap postage have brought distant parts of the country into quick and easy communication, and so have aided in teaching a common language. The railroad has penetrated every corner of the land and made us a nation of travelers.
Countless human shuttles thus 'are thrown daily across the land in every direction, carrying with them the threads of thought and speech and doing their part to make one pattern of the whole. No doubt our maps, which still present so many different kinds of names, will in time lose the strangeness and the "foreign air" that are so noticeable now.

Parental Parsimony.

Everything is by comparison. Said a woman recently of a young married couple whose families are counted "immensely rich": "They really cannot live on their income; it is shocking to pinch as they must. Why, you know, his father only gives him $10,000 a year. He has a salary of $5,000 and she has an allowance from her family of $10,000—only $25,000, with a $100,- 000 house to keep up. It's outrageous with all the money there is in those two families!" Twenty-five thousand dollars income and a completely furnished house and yet counted paupers by the world in which they move.
Better change the orbit and come into one of common sense.—Boston Herald.

Mayfair and the Commons.

The sweeping revolution in the make-up of the new house of commons has eliminated most of the members notable for their punctiliousness in dress and conspicuous in entertaining society women on the terrace during the season. Rank and fashion and sport are deeply concerned over the change in the personnel. Divorce from Mayfair, however, may not distract from the efficiency of the house for the transaction of public business.

The Backbone of a Mighty Nation is good food—food for brain, food for brawn, food that is strengthening, that gives energy and courage. Without a proper appreciation of this great fundamental truth no nation can rise to greatness.

As an article of food, soda crackers are being used more and more every day, as is attested by the sale of nearly 400,000,000 packages of Uneeda Biscuit, which have come to be recognized as the most perfect soda cracker the world has ever known.

And so Uneeda Biscuit will soon be on every table at every meal, giving life, health and strength to the American people, thus in very truth becoming the backbone of the nation.
